Experience and Education Equipped Dr. Favors as After - School Chief

by Virginia Beauchamp

Everything in Dr. Jo Anne Favors' life seems to have been designed to prepare her for the responsibility she now holds at Greenbelt Center School, where she has developed and is Director of the after-school program. She brings to this program, designed primarily for children from the drug-infested area of Washington Heights, certain special experiences. Not least of these is to have been the mother of ten children.

Equally important was to grow up black in a white society, where the schools she herself attended made the achievements and concerns of black people virtually invisible. Both conditions have led Dr. Favors to focus her career and to shape her education so that she has become just exactly the person for the task at hand.

She was already the mother of ten before she found a way to proceed with her own college education. She had grown up in Sioux City, Iowa. When she was in her late 20s, she moved to St. Paul, Minnesota. One of her children had died in infancy; but the tragic fate of another, now dead, provided the kind of heart-wrenching experience that leads her to empathize with the situations of many of her students and their families. Her 19-year-old son who got mixed up in the drug scene in St. Paul, ended up being shot in the neck. Although the wound was not fatal, it left him a quadriplegic, a condition in which he survived for ten more years.

In the mid- to late-1960s Dr. Favors became interested in children's after-school programs, particularly in developing libraries in the black community through a Community Action grant. She found herself always drawn to issues of education and to filling the void black children felt because there were no affirming experiences—no black history and no attention given to black people in constructive roles.

Going to College

Following a divorce, Dr. Favors sought a way to get an education. She had been employed as an assistant to the director of the Equal Education Opportunity (EEO) program at Macalester College in St. Paul dealing with concerns of 75 minority students attending under an expense- paid plan developed and implemented under the presidency of Dr. Arthur Fleming. Around this time she heard about another educational program that might answer her own needs—the "university without walls" of Minnesota Metropolitan State University. Under this program Dr. Favors was able to receive two years of academic credit for learning acquired through life experiences. She then worked out a contract arrangement to complete her degree work through independent study under academic supervision.

Move to D.C.

By now, however, she was tired of St. Paul's cold weather and decided to move with her three youngest children to Washington, D.C. She was drawn there by the presence of friends and by her intense interest in politics, which had been whetted by community service work in Minnesota, where she had helped in planning for the sixth Pan African Congress, held in Dar es Sallam, Tanzania. In Washington she found work as an administrative assistant at the University of the District of Columbia and then as a consultant with black colleges on developing black studies curricula for freshmen.

During this time Dr. Favors had not forgotten her own desire to complete her education. Getting in touch with the Minnesota program in which she had already worked out a contract for a degree, she was able to make special arrangements to complete her course work under supervisors at UDC and with other qualified persons in the area. Within one year she finished the two-year program, graduating with a B.A. in administration.

With a fellowship from the University of Maryland, Dr. Favors then went on to earn an M.A. in Urban Studies, specializing in economics, finance, institutional budgeting and statistics. Her research focus dealt with the question of how urban students are educated.

A fellowship from the Whitney Young Foundation to perform a community internship in children's extracurricular programming then paved the way for Dr. Favors to pursue doctoral studies. With her profound interest in educational processes, she enrolled in a Ph.D. program in Curriculum and Instruction in the College of Education at Maryland. In her dissertation work she studied educational change at Dunbar High School in Baltimore over the period from 1968 to 1982, choosing that period because in 1969 the program at Dunbar had specifically changed to deal with community needs. As a result of her study, Dr. Favors concluded that people handicapped by a poor education are no less interested in their community or the need for a quality education than are those whose opportunities have been greater.

Community Programs

Over the years, Dr. Favors has been drawn to work with after-school programs. While employed at Macalester College, she also participated in a program for children especially focused on relevant social and academic enrichment offerings in the black community. This project was made possible by the Black Student Program at the college. She also became involved in issues of housing and employment in the black community.

Later, in the District, she developed a proposal which was presented to the D.C. Humanities Council to fund a parent forum on how values are transmitted through various cultural agencies, such as literature, dance the church and the mass media. At Greenbelt Center School these interests concerning the importance of constructive images in helping children to imagine fulfilling roles for themselves and in pursuing the academic excellence necessary to achieve these roles have become the major focus of the after-school program.

Dr. Favors emphasizes that helping to create and realize these positive images can be further enhanced by the contributions of volunteers and she welcomes inquiries from anyone who may have something to contribute. Those interested in participating are asked to call Center School at 474-7111.

City Rejects Centerway Bids Nearly Double Budgeted Costs

by Diane Oberg

At a special meeting on September 18, the Greenbelt City Council rejected both bids received for the reconstruction of Centerway, and discussed the site plan for a proposed high-rise apartment building on the Sunrise Property,

The city had budgeted $375,000 for the complete reconstruction of Centerway and the adjacent sidewalk. Two bids were received, one of which excluded some work and substituted concrete for the planned granite curbs. Both bids exceeded $600,000. On the advice of the City Solicitor Robert Manzi, council rejected the bids and authorized City Manager James K. Giese to attempt to negotiate a better price with the two companies who had bid.

Sunrise Property

Owners of the Sunrise property are seeking county approval for a site plan for a high rise apartment building. The property is located at the end of Hanover Drive, adjacent to the Beltway between Greenway Village Apartments and the Holiday Inn. Council has long opposed this project, reiterating its opposition at this meeting.

However, City Planning and Development Coordinator Celia Wilson pointed out that the city has no leverage to fight the development. The property already has the required zoning and the owners require only county approval of their site plan in order to acquire permits to begin construction.

According to Wilson, under county law the property cannot be downzoned once the owner begins construction by pouring building footers. She suggested that the owners may be mainly interested in protecting their property rights. Since they did not yet have detailed architectural drawings, Wilson felt that construction beyond the footers might not be imminent.

Wilson had several concerns about the proposed site plan. (Although the city has no right to approve or disapprove the plan, it may forward comments to the county Planning Board.) The plan shows the apartment building facing the Beltway, with a three-story parking garage confronting motorists on Hanover Drive. Wilson had a number of questions about traffic circulation on the property, including traffic patterns to and through the garage, the apparent lack of pedestrian pathways out of the garage and the scarcity of landscaping. She said that the developer was providing the minimum amount of landscaping required by county law and planned to use the smallest acceptable plantings. This minimal compliance would result in some areas, she said, in virtually no screening of the project. Because of the amount of grading to be done all of the trees existing on the property would most likely be removed.

In response to revised county regulations increasing parking requirements, the developer has added a strip of underground parking with vehicles and pedestrians entering and exiting only on the two ends. Council members Antoinette M. Bram and Edward Putens were concerned about the safety of future residents both from assault and in case of a vehicle fire underground. However, Wilson said that there are no county requirements for security cameras or guards.

The Advisory Planning Board reviewed the plan at their September 13 meeting. They recommended that council, in addition to Wilson's concerns, also ask the county to consider requiring the developer to provide sitting/picnic areas, to conform to the new county landscape manual which has not yet been formally adopted, and to refer sign permits to the city for review.

Council unanimously agreed to forward the comments of Wilson and the Advisory Planning Board, along with their own concerns about safety, to the county. The Planning Board hearing is scheduled for September 28.

Attention Bookworms Library Open Sundays

Greenbelters now have an attractive alternative for turning those long wintry Sunday afternoons to good use. For the first time, the Greenbelt Library, in common with eight other county branches will open from 1 - 5 p.m. on Sundays through May. In the past, the county library system has had branches open on Sundays, but Greenbelt was never included.

The library's newly remodeled facilities include attractive and comfortable areas for study or browsing. Greenbelt's extensive collection of resources includes a wide variety of compact discs, audio tapes, and video cassette tapes. There is a small charge for videos, and other materials are available on free loan.

In addition to the loan collection and the reference library, Greenbelt also has available IBM and Apple computers with a wide range of popular software available for use within the library. Software available includes spreadsheets, graphics, typing tutors, word processing and database management packages.

Council Tidbits

The preliminary plan of subdivision for Greenbrook Manor was approved.

Isaacs requested a detailed report on the reasons for continued delays in opening the new police station. The occupancy date, originally planned for April, has been moved back to November. On the advice of Manzi, this report will be presented to council in a closed session.

Sandy Bowers was appointed to the Crime Prevention Committee and council accepted the resignation of P. J. Siegel from that board. Valerie Watson was appointed to the Arts Advisory Committee.

Just Say "No"

The Senior Co-op Housing Committee of Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative has requested that citizens say yes to the senior housing site on the election day questionnaire. This plan would require that the city give up, for free, land that has been set aside or is traditionally a part of the town greenspace.

There are many arguments that can be put forward against this plan and few in favor. Regarding the latter, Mr. Rosenzweig, speaking for this housing committee (September 28 News Review), cites the volunteer work of some (unnamed) people as justification for this public land giveaway. There are two problems with this often-heard argument about volunteers. First is the assumption that all or most of the people who will benefit from this giveaway are in some way prominent and notable volunteers. This, however, has not been demonstrated nor can it possibly be true. Second, and more importantly, is the fact that volunteer work is by its very nature noble and selfless. Volunteers don't expect a reward. Mr. Rosenzweig's suggestion that they should be rewarded cheapens the nature of the act and belittles the contributions of those volunteers who do give freely of their time.

In short, the argument that we've served as volunteers so we should get free land is no argument. The green belt should not be sold off at any price and certainly none of it should be given away free to the benefit of a few and to the disadvantage of many. Mark your questionnaire against the "senior" citizen housing site on election day and preserve for your children the heritage so many have labored to maintain.

Urges Support For Elderly Housing

A questionnaire will appear at the polls this coming November 7, asking citizens to approve or disapprove of the city leasing three acres of land for a 100-unit cooperative senior housing facility.

Questions are running rampant around town. Why should the city give three acres of land away? How much will it cost the citizens? What about open space? Why should seniors have this advantage?

As a resident of Greenbelt for 37 years and a member of the Senior Co-op Housing Committee of the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative let me try to set the record straight. The city will not be giving any land away, it w lease three acres to the housing co-op and retain ownership of the land It will not cost the city any tax dollars. In fact, it will broaden the tax base. The co-op will pay property taxes. As fas as open space is concerned, only those trees that are necessary to erect the building will be cut. Possibly a program can be arranged to replace tree for tree.

Showing support on the questionnaire will help keep long-time Greenbelters in Greenbelt, performing hundreds of hours of volunteer work and making housing available for many younger families. We get three acres and we leave available 100 homes.

States and counties across the country and even Prince Georges County are donating land and funds to private developers to build middle income housing. Greenbelt can become a leader in promoting such housing for its seniors. To bring this to fruition, please show your support on the questionnaire, November 7.

THANKS

To all the people that came to our booth at the Labor Day celebration, many thanks for your interest in drug prevention. Thanks also to the parents who brought their children for finger printing. It is wonderful to know that these parents are concerned enough to make this effort. The DARE program is of great interest to so many young people and for this we are grateful.

Wants to Stay

I am a senior citizen who has lived in Greenbelt for the past 30 years. I have enjoyed the community and have many friends here. But I am getting older, the single family home that I own is becoming a burden, instead of a joy to me. I find myself paying others to do the mowing and odd jobs—things that I once did for myself. The maintenance of my home is too much for me. I need a simpler lifestyle. But to find the housing that I need means moving to a new community. But moving is not without its problems. As one gets older, the process of relocating becomes harder — learning new traffic patterns, stores and making new friends are more difficult.

I am asking that the voters of Greenbelt make it possible for me and others like me to stay in the community. On the election questionnaire there will be a question on whether the city should lease a plot of land to us, so that we may build a co-op apartment building. This building would be along the lines of Green Ridge House, but would be open to those with a higher income level. There would be a membership capital payment fee and a monthly support payment would be required from every resident. We would also pay taxes to the city (as individuals and as property owning co-op) and we would still support the many functions and activities of this city that we have come to love.

Please, help us to remain here When you see the question about co-op housing for senior citizens, show us that you care.

Stanley R. Edwards, Sr.

Long-time Greenbelt resident Stanley R. Edwards, Sr., died Thursday, September 28, at his home on Forestway.

Edwards was born in Kumback, Indiana in 1909. In 1930 he and Vivian were married in Indianapolis. He attended Butler College during the depression. A job with the federal government brought the young couple to Washington, where they lived first in rented quarters with outdoor plumbing in McLean, Virginia. When their first child was born, Edwards moved his family to Greenbelt. "I had to move us out to Greenbelt all by myself," Edwards wrote in the City of Greenbelt's book of reflections by its early residents "Looking Back." "It was February 1939 and my wife was in the hospital where she had just had our first child. When they were allowed to come home it was to our new home in Greenbelt," a third floor walk-up apartment on Crescent Road with central heating.

Together they raised two sons while living at 34 Ridge Road until 1957, when they bought the home on Forestway.

In 1941 he joined the Minutemen of Greenbelt and a local militia, the airplane spotters, who took turns watching the skies from the rooftops at the Center. He joined the army and was stationed at Aberdeen, Md., during the war.

Edwards was a charter member of the Community Church, a member of the Can-Do Club in those early days to raise funds for a church building. He later served on the Board of Deacons for many years. Edwards organized the church's Mother's Day dinners and summer fish fries and was a leader of the Explorer Post 202 for 15 years. He arranged for the scout troop to take over the Co-op's then-failing Christmas tree sales, turning it into a profitable fundraiser which then paid most of the cost for three trips to camp in Philmont, New Mexico, for all the boys.

Edwards was elected to the City Council in 1957, serving tw years. He was also a member of the Masons, the American Legion Post 136 and the Garden Club.

Edwards is survived by his wife Vivian, of the home; three sisters; sons Stanley R., Jr. and William F., II; and two grandchildren, Katherine Anne and William F., III.

A memorial service was held Wednesday evening at the Community Church. The family suggests donations may be made to the Community Church Memorial Garden Fund.

Diane Kritt

Diane Joan Kritt, 46, a former Greenbelter died of cancer September 23 at Howard County General Hospital. She lived in Burtonsville.

Education Focus of Press Conference Held at ERHS

by Kelly Harmon

Members of the Democratic party including Senators Barbara Mikulski and Edward Kennedy, Governor William Donald Schaefer, Senate Majority Leader George E. Mitchell and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, gathered on Wednesday, September 20 at Eleanor Roosevelt High School to announce the formation of a bipartisan coalition for the improvement of education in the United States.

The announcement came prior to last week's Education Summit Meeting with the nation's governors, a meeting that has been planned since 1984 when President Ronald Reagan signed legislation enacting it. During the summit, the governors met with President George Bush in Charlottesville, Va. to discuss plans for better educating America. The Democrats' announcement was closely related to the planned summit discussions.

The topic of the press conference was clear from the beginning: Education must begin to take a strong priority in all areas of America. Many of those present made reference to the Nation at Risk report, which stresses the need to raise academic standards in the United States.

Senator William Clinton of Arkansas said, "We don't score like the leader of the free world."

The Democrats who gathered at Eleanor Roosevelt offered a challenge to President Bush. In a collective statement they said, "We will provide the federal leadership to ensure that American education is second to none before the end of this century—we call on President Bush to join us in that commitment."

Performance Goals

The statement continued: "If the economic turmoil of this decade teaches us anything, it is that those nations which invest in the education of its citizens will out-perform those that do not."

In order to implement their strategy of educational reform, those attending proposed six performance goals: (1) increase the number of preschool children attending early childhood development programs; (2) raise basic achievement skills of all students to their grade level or above and reduce the discrepancy of test scores between black, white and Hispanic students by 1993 or before; (3) improve the high school graduating rate every year by reducing dropouts and the number of illiterate Americans; and (4) annually improve math, science and foreign language performance of American students until the students exceed the performance of other industrialized nations.

A fifth goal was to increase college participation by all Americans, especially minorities, by 1993 or before, to increase the imbalance between grants and loans in financing college education so that all high school graduates have equal opportunity to participate in post-secondary education and training by the year 2000. The sixth goal was to increase the number of fully qualified teachers and take steps to upgrade the status of the profession.

Changing Standards

Mitchell stated that until now, America's history shows that each generation has had an education which has surpassed its predecessor, this creating a higher standard of living.

Today, however, he pointed out, only five percent of 11th graders can read college level material. Only six percent can do simple algebra. Twenty-three million Americans are functionally illiterate, including 17 percent of high school students. One in every five high schoolers drops out.

He continued, "Unless the trends change, the first generation of Americans to live in the 21st century will be the first generation of Americans to have a lower standard of living than their parents."

Gepnardt described Wednesday's press conference as "a cooperative, strenuous effort on the part of governors, educators and principals to put forth a statement on education."

He added: "Education is the answer to a nation that is waking up to the fact that in the 21st century true strength will be measured in megabytes, not megatons. Education is the answer to inner city (drug users) desperate for hope, to people who strive for the American dream, and to young entrepreneurs who want to build a better mousetrap or a smaller microchip."

Bipartisan Goals

Asked why only Democratic leaders were present at the meeting, Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island said, "The goals we set forth are not partisan goals. We set them forth as Democrats because leadership in education has always been the hallmark of our party. But we also know that reaching them will require the cooperation, assistance and leadership of our Republican colleagues in the Congress, and most particularly of the President."

Senator Pell is chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Education. He urges the President "to place education among the very highest priorities in the federal budget so that we might achieve the ultimate goal of educational opportunity for all."

Eleanor Roosevelt High School was chosen for the press conference because "it is a model high school for every city and town," according to Mitchell.

It is a magnet school of 2,400 students that focuses on math and sciences. Its four-year math and science program provides increased educational opportunities for selected students from all areas of Prince Georges County. The program focuses on biological and physical sciences and pre-engineering technology. Following the press conference there was a tour of the school.

Irving had supported the committee by buying a ticket in the name of his daughter which he then drew. Rosendahl of Hanover Parkway won a framed photo of the Parcel 1 woods.

On Monday afternoon, oil paintings by Jane Love that had been entered in the art show were awarded to two other Greenbelt residents. Steven Gigliotti of 4 D Ridge won "Parcel 1: Fall," and Jeannie L. Smith of 13R Hillside won "Parcel 1: Winter."

CITY NOTES

The general crew worked on the path between Crescent Road and the lake path. Special details crewmen painted curb and gutters and traffic lanes.

The parks crew worked on maintenance of the ball fields as well as cutting roadsides where necessary in the City.

The Horticulturist is working on wildflower planting for the slope on Hanover Parkway. He has also been doing landscaping in front of the Public Works building.

The street crew replaced curb and gutter on Laurel Hill and installed curb and gutter on Crescent Road near the lake park entrance. They also finished working on the bulldozer.

The street crew finished the path leading from Crescent Road at Ridge Road to the lake park and landscaping was done by the horticulturist crew. In preparation for the recent storm, the street crew cleaned storm drains, curbs, and gutters. The crew was also busy patching potholes and repairing the bulldozer.

The parks crew have been involved in the first stage of the fall athletic field maintenance program which consists of aeration and seeding.

The special details crew conducted a sign inventory and continued painting traffic control markings.

Several employees attended seminars on welding and electrical codes.

Curb and Gutter ReplacementPlanned

Greenbelt City Manager James Giese has announced plans to replace curbs and gutters in Lakeside and Woodland Hills subdivisions. He says the decision to replace the 1950's style rolled curbs comes from resident complaints and from curb inefficiency. Rolled curbs are less effective in keeping cars off lawns. They are also less effective in channeling storm water.

Curbs will be replaced with the standard flatfaced curbing and driveways will be adjusted to meet the new curbs. Some adjacent lawn and sidewalks will be removed to ease construction but will be replaced.

Giese expects construction to begin in the spring and to last as long as two or more years. even though less than a mile of curb will be replaced. Curbs will be completed as public works crew and city contractor's schedule permits.

Woodland Hills and Lakeside communities will have the option of constructing sidewalks where none now exist. This will be discussed at a community meeting on September 24. Questions should be addressed to community associations or the Public Works.

Audubon Birdseed Sale

The Audubon Society will hold a benefit wild birdseed sale on Oct. 14 and 15: 10 a.m. -3 p.m. The pickup site will be at the BWI Airport Limo parking lot. Call 652-5964 for details.

KEEPING THE GREEN IN GREENBELT

ED PUTENS

One of the most compelling public concerns has been land acquisition. It's no wonder. Since the last election, the City has acquired or committed itself to acquiring about 206 acres of green space. This almost doubles the acreage acquired in the previous ten years. Moreover, the land acquired or about to be acquired by the City represents about 40% of all City-owned green space.

Most significant is the 101-acre Parcel 1. This purchase will be completed in February. Once acquired, Parcel 1 should be preserved permanently in its natural state.

Some of the less publicized acquisitions are also important. These include over seven acres being added to Schrom Hills Park; Parcel 57, next to Hunting Ridge, which will become permanent green space instead of an apartment complex; and 10 acres added to the Buddy Attick Lake Park near Charlestowne Village.

Acquiring additional green space should be a continuing priority. I support the recommendation of our Park and Recreation Advisory Board for a comprehensive land acquisition and park development plan, to be completed within one year. This should include strategies and specific goals for acquiring and preserving green space.

In addition, I propose the following land use objectives for 1990 and 1991.

- Adopt and implement a Master Plan for the Buddy Attick Lake Park. This should include measures to preserve the natural environment; maintain water quality in the Lake; avoid overuse of Park grounds and facilities; and improve maintenance.
- Complete Schrom Hills Park within the planned two years. I continue to support inclusion of a lake at one end of the Park, near the Greenbrook Townhouses.
- Secure a firm commitment from the County to preserve all or virtually all of the green space at the North End School site. the new school can be built without removing the trees, which are an important part of the green belt.
- Adoption of a plan for a ball field complex at Northway Fields, but with the remainder of the just-acquired 72 acres to be preserved as green space. The plan must balance the urgent need for more recreational space for our children with our concern for enhancing the green belt.
- Adopt and start implementing a system of pedestrian and bicycle paths linking all parts of the City. This is important for recreational reasons but also for fostering a sense of common identity among all neighborhoods in Greenbelt. It should be possible to walk or cycle to anywhere in Greenbelt and be safe from vehicle traffic.
- Revive the recent but languishing "New Greenbelt" urban design study on landscaping and green space planning in Greenbelt East.
- Adopt a land use plan to guide and control development in the area of the Greenbelt Metro Station. Passengers arriving at a place called "Greenbelt Station" should be able to see some of the green belt.

GHI Board Appoints Liebscher, Hears Request for New House

by Pat Scully

The September 14 meeting of the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) board brought new faces and familiar faces in new roles. With the resignation of Andrea Haslinger (who will be on a three-year job assignment in Europe), a new vice president and a new member of the board were needed. In unanimous elections, the GHI board chose Diane Leibscher to fill Haslinger's board seat, elected Ray McCawley vice president and Chuck Hess treasurer, a role made vacant by McCawley's elevation to the vice presidency. A vacancy still exists on the board, created by Suzanne Zappasodi's resignation on August 30.

President Wayne Williams announced appointments of the GHI representatives to the city Advisory Committee on Recycling and Refuse Collection Procedures: Henry Haslach, Barry Solomon and Beth Anderson, with Charlotte Johnson and Kari Anderson serving as first and second alternates, respectively. Williams stressed the need for alternates because of the heavy workload and immediate need for action anticipated for the Task Force. He also mentioned how impressed he was with the quality and number of volunteers, many of whom have academic and practical experience in environmental science and municipal recycling task forces.

A New Unit?

Jim Maher, Jr., presented preliminary site plans for a house he would like to construct, as part of GHI, utilizing the boiler room site between 8 and 10 Courts of Laurel Hill. Maher proposes to build a 4-bedroom house, which would blend architecturally with the existing GHI homes, using modular construction to minimize disturbance. He would defray all expenses and occupy the house under a Mutual Ownership Contract, similar to those used for the "larger" homes.

While the board members were pleased with the siting and design of the house, a number of questions remained. Does the question of allowing construction, and approving the design, need to be put before all members or just the affected neighbors? Does the approval previously given for sale of the boiler room buildings cover this case, which is not an addition to or renovation of a boiler room but demolition and replacement? Are there zoning restrictions on adding a new unit within the RPC zone? What type of precedents would be set? The board directed staff to investigate the zoning, bylaws and financial questions concerning the proposed new unit and report back.

House and Garden Tour

Jim Maher, Sr. reported for the Architecture and Environment Committee on progress for the House and Garden Tour. To date, 15 members had agreed to open their homes to the tour on Sunday, September 24. The A&E Committee hoped to have at least 25 homes on the tour. The museum will be used as a point of departure, with tourists being sent out in groups of about 5, to try to prevent too many people from visiting any house at one time.

Bylaws

General Manager Ron Colton reported on his research and study of the GHI bylaws and the types of issues that exist. He identified four main categories where revision of the bylaws seems to be called for: lack of conformance with applicable laws, lack of accord with GHI's practices, lack of clarity, and omissions.

Convinced of the need for revision of the bylaws, the board discussed in depth the approach and the next steps to be taken in such revision. Two options were considered: starting with a standard set of bylaws for Maryland cooperatives (to help ensure completeness and cohesion) and modifying it to reflect the unique GHI features; or starting with the existing bylaws, editing ambiguous or inconsistent sections and grafting on sections from the standard document to rectify omissions.

Throughout the discussion, board members and staff stressed that this is an opportunity to define GHI in a readily intelligible, clear, and concise document. The goal was not to change the respective powers of the board, members and staff, but to highlight the unique features of GHI. The expertise of the membership, in both knowledge of GHI and legal issues, should be sought, working on a committee with the staff.

Colton was directed to proceed with his review of the bylaws starting with the standard Maryland cooperative bylaws and identifying areas where GHI bylaws differ or present unique features.

Windows

The projected total failure of the seals on the thermal window panes, and how members should pay for replacement, were the subject of detailed discussion. Staff sought formal board approval to continue their current policy of charging individual members for the replacement of windows on which the seal has broken, leading to condensation and clouding of windows. The other option would be to cover such replacement from the maintenance budget, funded by all members' monthly fees.

It is anticipated that over the next 20 years, all of the rehab thermal windows will need such replacement, a total of 40,000 windows. Replacement costs approximately $110 per sash. Projecting a 5% failure rate per year would mean a cost of $220,000 per year for window replacement, necessitating a 6% raise in member fees for windows alone.

By a narrow vote of 4-3, with Williams abstaining, the board voted to continue the current policy of members paying for window replacement. Problems that prevent windows from functioning (i.e., opening or closing) will continue to be corrected under routine maintenance procedures.

Other Actions

Colton presented the schedule for presentation of the budget to the board, work sessions, the membership meeting, and board readings of the annual budget. The board will consider the budget on October 5, 19 and 26 (if quired). The budge will be given first and second readings for adoption at board meetings on November 2 and 16.

The board also agreed to put a referendum before the members to allow GHI to loan GDC money for rehabilitation of the GDC apartments. Money for the loan could come from the resserves. Instead of delaying the issue until the 1990 annual meeting, the board directed staff to attempt to have sufficient information available to allow discussion of the referendum at the public meeting on the budget.

The next regular meeting of the GHI board will be Thursday, October 5th.

Greenbelt Comets Achieve First Division Victory

by Kevin Hackett

Off to an ominous start, the Greenbelt Comets fell 4-0 in the hot, muggy fields of September to the Stoddert Washington Lancers, a team as dominant as the weather. They fought back in a following game to keep the McClean Raiders at bay, 0-0. The Comets were repeatedly repelled from the goal.

Luck would evade them again, the following week. The Comets again fell prey, this time to the Fairfax Falcons, 4-3. But the Comets had scored! The first goal came on a shot by Raphael Mingo that was deflected from the goal bar into the path of Etim Edim, who punched it in. This was followed by a gentle lofting pass from Miguel Pereira to Edim, who won a foot race to the goal. Edim finished his hat-trick by scoring off a pass by Robert Ramirez.

The Comets did finally have their day. When the Comets met the Fairfax Force, the Force gave, 4-3. Again, Edim achieved the hat-trick. His first goal was made possible by the fine ball control of Jay Blavatt at the goal mouth. Pereira then arched a corner kick to Edim, who headed it in. The third score was by Craig Halper, who, upon trapping a ball deflected by a defender, slammed it through. For the final goal, Pereira arched a lead pass to Edim, who again slipped past the defenders and drove a rolling shot to the corner. With a tie and a win, the Greenbelt Comets are right in the middle of the NCSL Division III standings.

The Greenbelt Comets are sponsored by Springhill Lake and also by Three Brothers Pizza, Capital Office Park and Princeton Electric Co.

Cooperative Main Street

Downtown, uptown, across town — from county to county, state to state and all across the nation — cooperatives play an important role in helping their communities thrive.

In urban areas, the suburbs, small towns and rural communities there are 45,000 cooperative organizations that serve 90 million people. These co-ops, owned and operated by their members, provide a wide range of goods and services that benefit their friends, neighbors and communities.

There are co-ops for electric and telephone service, credit unions, farm marketing and farm supply, insurance, health and day care, farm credit, housing, florists and news services. In fact, there could be a co-op for anything and anywhere people need to get things done both economically and efficiently.

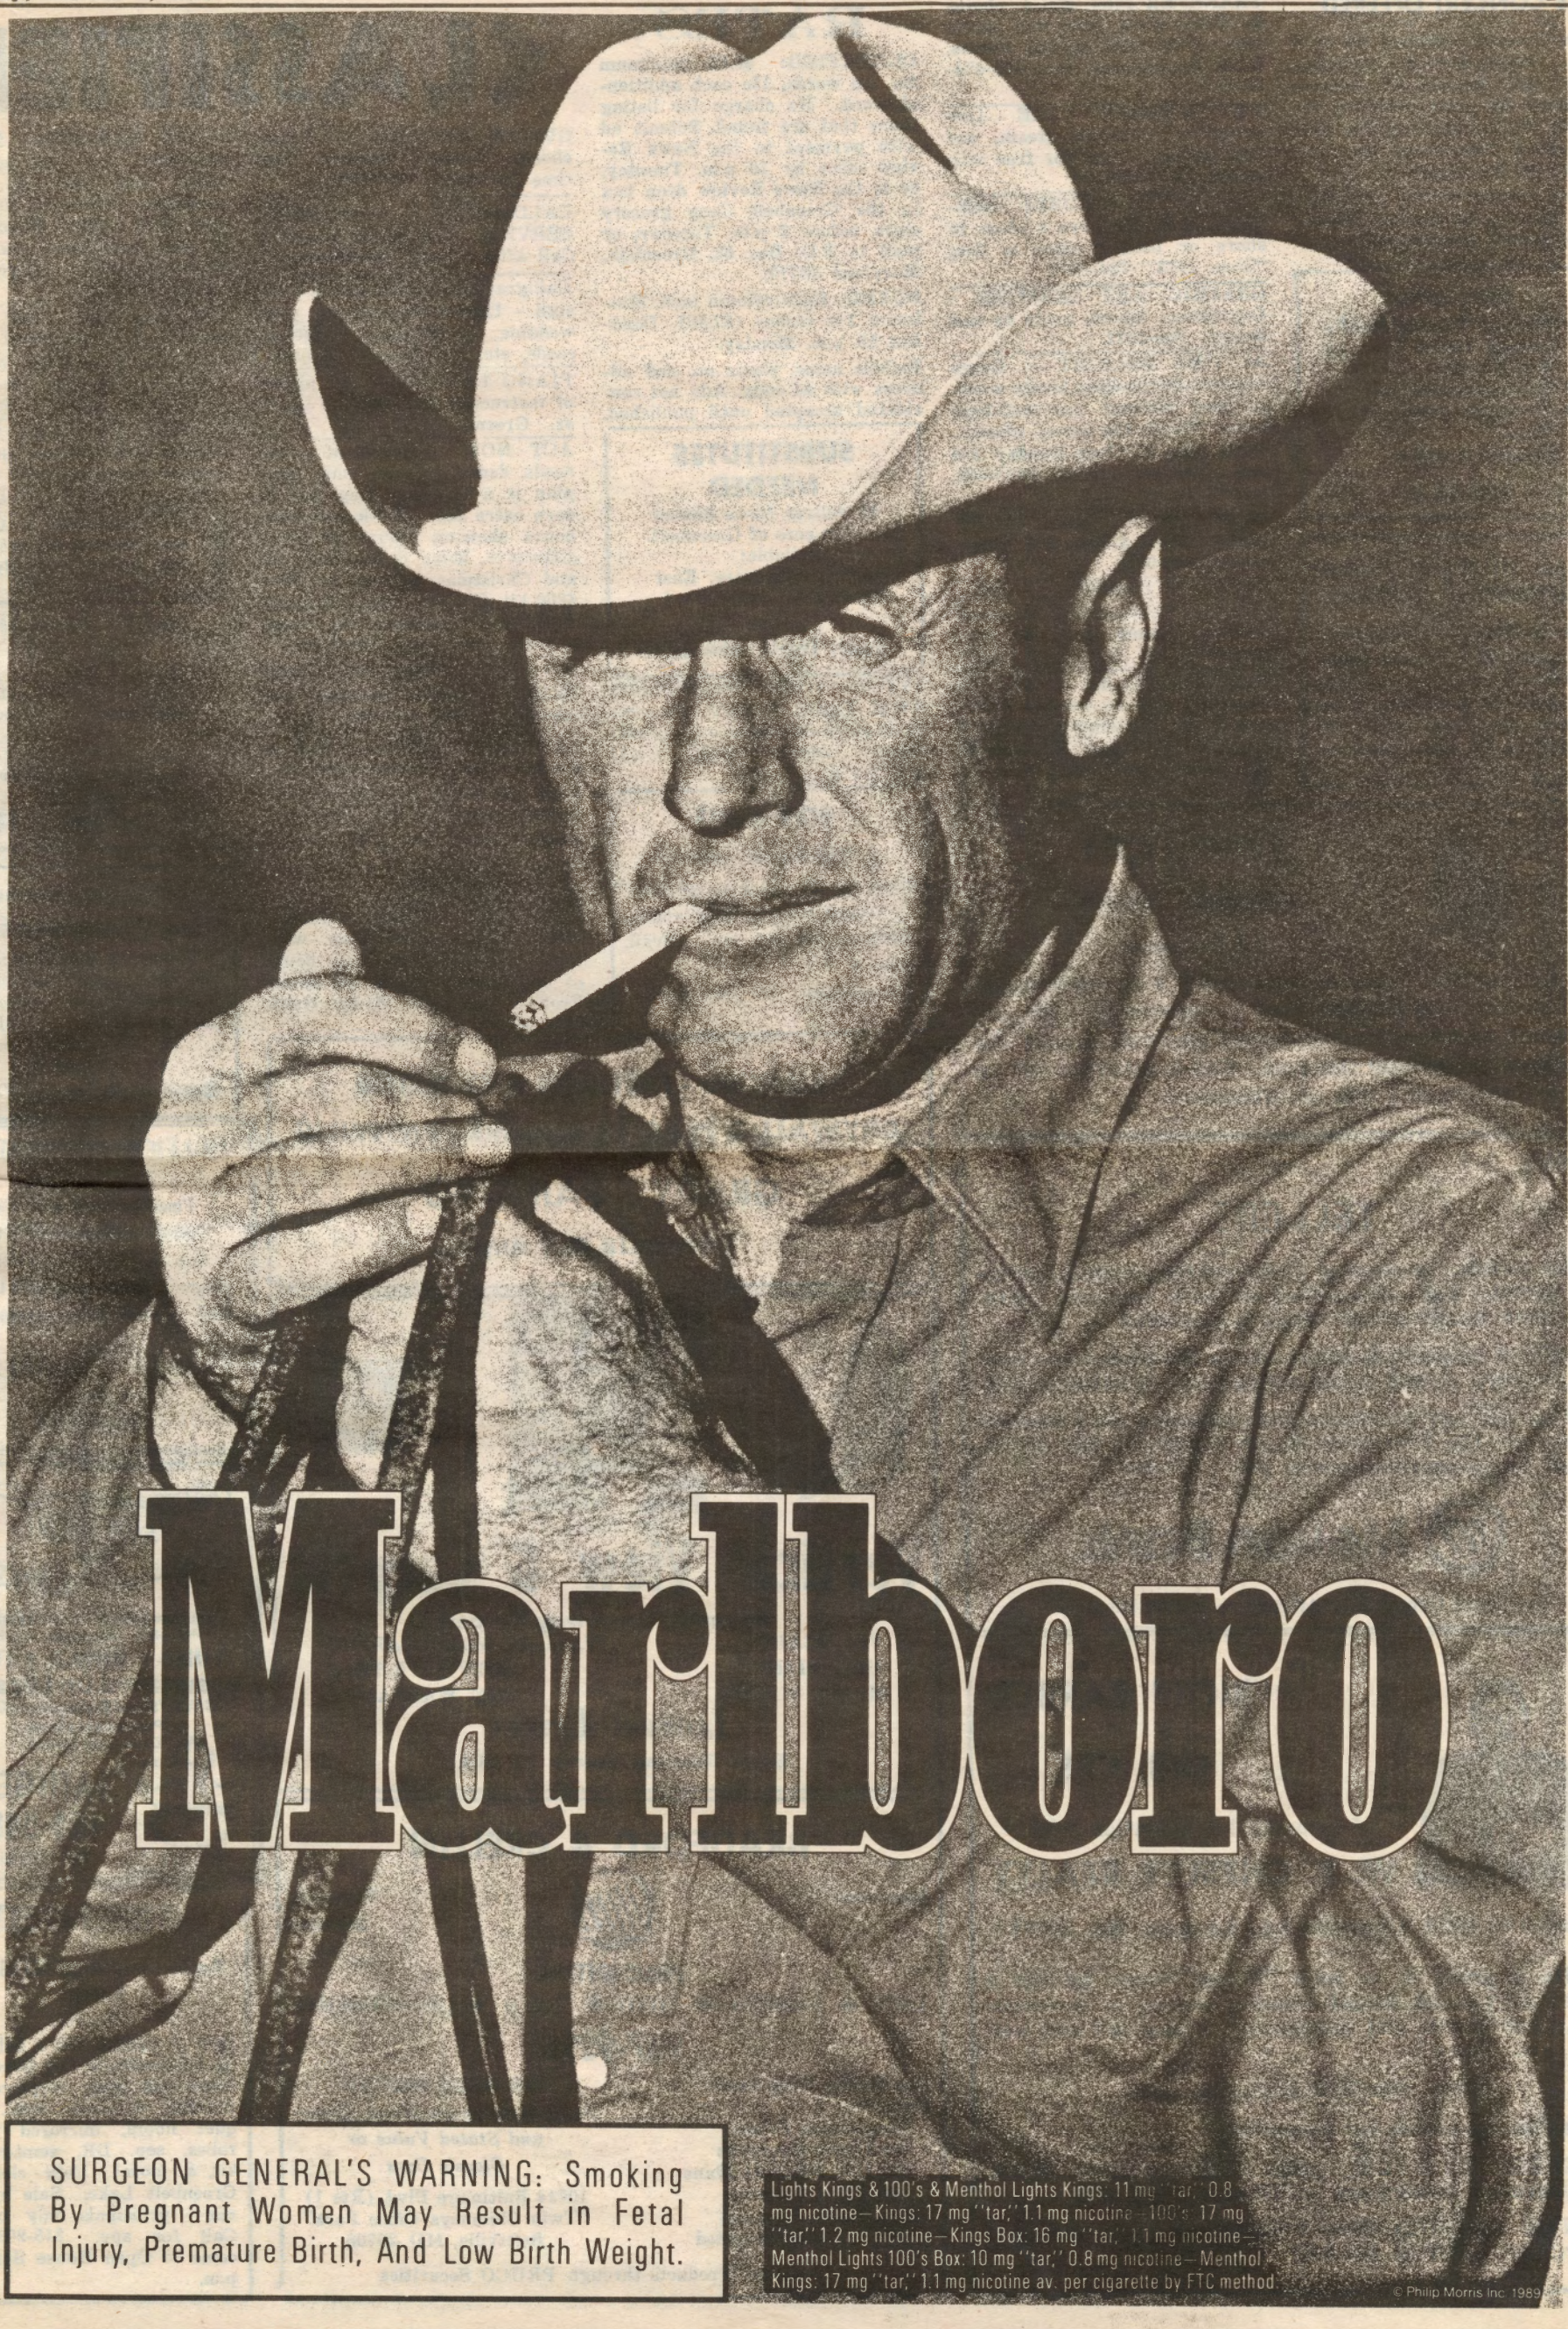

Look around your neighborhood and community — no doubt you'll find a co-op or two working hard to provide important services that benefit everyone. Building communities the cooperative way benefits the entire nation!

October Is Co-op Month.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello Again:

Is a maintenance free battery really maintenance free?

The title maintenance free is a little deceiving. Most of those type of batteries come with sealed top caps which don't allow visual inspections to check electrolyte level. Although, some of these do in fast have removable top caps. Battery cables and terminal ends still corrode, no matter what kind of battery you have. So much for the maintenance free theory.

If electrolyte level is low, there must be a reason: a damaged case, system over charging due to an alternator or voltage regulator. or even wiring or excessive current demand .

On battery cables or terminal ends, the primary reason for low electrolyte level is a poor connection or corrosion. When this occurs a resistance point is made. When there is a resistance point, there are also high temperatures - high enough to melt the terminal ends and battery area.

Preventive maintenance scheduling still plays a big role in maintenance free automotive parts.

Till next time

Think Preventive Maintenance
